

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

REPORT.

In compliance with the Revised Laws and in accordance with the rules of the School Board, the committee appointed to prepare the annual report of the School Committee for the year 1905 respectfully submit the following:

SCHOOL SYSTEM.

The public school system of Boston comprises¹ one Normal School, two Latin Schools (one for boys and one for girls), nine High Schools, the Mechanic Arts High School (for boys), sixty-two Grammar Schools, seven hundred eighteen Primary Classes, seven Special Classes, one hundred Kindergartens, one School for the Deaf, six Evening High Schools and thirteen Evening Elementary Schools, six Evening Drawing Schools, a special School on Spectacle Island, forty-six Manual Training Schools, and thirty-six Schools of Cookery.

STATISTICS.²

The following statistics are for the year ended June 30, 1905, excepting the number of children in Boston between the ages of five and fifteen years, and the number reported as attending public and private schools, which are from the census taken September 1, 1905:

² Other and more complete statistics may be found in School Documents Nos. 7 and 8, 1905.

² Five of the Evening High Schools are organized in two divisions, Division I. holding sessions on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings; Division II. on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Thus there are practically two sets of pupils and but one set of teachers. For statistical purposes, the two sets of pupils are added together, while the teachers are counted but once.

The annual report of the School Committee usually consists of a review of the more important matters that have engaged the attention of the Board during the year that it covers, with such comments and suggestions relating to the school system in general as seem opportune and useful. This year, however, your committee find that the recently issued report of the Superintendent has so fully covered this field that there is little, if anything, to add to what has already been said by him.

Previous to the reorganization of the School Committee in 1875, Boston, with its 342,000 inhabitants, administered its school affairs through a Board consisting of one hundred sixteen persons. At the same time the School Board of London, with a population of over 3,000,000, numbered but fifty members, and Birmingham, with approximately the same population as Boston, had a Board of but thirty. In the spring of 1875, an act was passed by the Legislature providing that at the annual election occurring in that year twenty-four persons, inhabitants of the city, should be elected to constitute, with the Mayor as chairman ex officio, the School Committee. One of the reasons assigned for this change was "to facilitate the transaction of business," a remark which perhaps refers to delays occasioned by the absence of a quorum, which not infrequently made postponements of the meetings of the former Board necessary. In 1885 an act was passed amending the City Charter, and providing, among other things, that the Mayor should not be a member, nor preside at any of the meetings, nor appoint any of the committees of either the Board of Aldermen or of the School Committee. Since then, until the present year, this organization has remained undisturbed, and eight persons have been elected annually to serve on the committee for a term of three years, excepting in infrequent cases when the death or retirement of a member necessitated the election of a successor for the remainder of an unexpired term.

The present Board of twenty-four members has therefore existed thirty years, in which time it has initiated many reforms and accomplished much for the advancement of the system as a whole. Perhaps a word of praise may be said of the faithful and unselfish service rendered by men and women of great ability and high ideals who have served upon the School Committee during this period from a sense of civic duty, and often at a considerable sacrifice of their personal interests. The appreciation of their fellow-citizens has not infrequently been expressed by repeated re-elections, and one of our number this year completes a service upon the School Committee of this and of a neighboring annexed municipality extending over twenty-two years, of which the last fifteen have been consecutive. This long service has been marked by untiring and zealous effort, and by a sincere desire to advance the interests committed to his charge.

Under the new law (Chap. 349, Acts of 1905), at the municipal election held in December of the present year, two members were elected to serve for a term of three years, two for a term of two years, and one for a term of one year, and thereafter at each annual municipal election there are to be elected, for the term of three years, so many persons as may be necessary to fill the places of the member or members whose term or terms are about to expire. Thus the elective system still continues, although an effort was made to induce the Legislature to establish a committee whose members should be appointed by the Mayor.

APPLICATION OF MODERN BUSINESS METHODS TO EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES.

In this era of great business and financial enterprises, the success of which depends in many cases upon superiority of output, economical administration, and elimination of waste, it seems pertinent to consider whether some, at least, of the methods adopted by successful corporations could not be employed to advantage in our school system. In other words, are all the by-products of our schools, so to speak, utilized to the fullest possible degree; is our administrative machinery economical and efficient, and does our product meet the requirements of the community which absorbs each year thousands of boys and girls from the public schools, each of whom must find a place in domestic, business or professional life? If this product were such as to come into direct and open competition with the goods from other markets; were its value a concrete thing that could be weighed or measured by accepted standards; could we know how much it cost to produce each of its units, the problem of an efficient and economical management of the school system could easily be reduced to a mere mathematical formula; but it goes without saying that such a thing is impossible. We can, however, arrive at a more or less definite conclusion, aided largely perhaps by the experience of other cities, as to whether our administrative methods are reasonably sound and efficient.

Everyone is in agreement that certain fundamental educational training is essential. A child should be taught to read, to write, to spell, to perform certain elementary processes in arithmetic, and to have some knowledge of grammar, geography, and perhaps be acquainted with the main facts of history, especially of the United States. The law of the State requires that every child between the ages of seven and fourteen years shall attend school. The law also provides that certain subjects in addition to those named, such as bookkeeping, drawing, music, manual training, foreign languages, ethics, the elements of the natural sciences, etc., shall, or may be, taught to an extent and thoroughness not definitely prescribed, and that opportunities for high and evening school instruction shall be provided under certain defined conditions. It then rests upon the school authorities to work out their own salvation with the financial means placed at their disposal.

From time to time this situation presents itself: The cost of the schools exceeds, or threatens to exceed, the appropriation. It is alleged on the one hand that the administration of the system is needlessly extravagant—too many fads and frills—and on the other, that the schools are what the public demands, and that their cost cannot be reduced without serious injury to the system and great detriment to the community. If expenses must be cut, the first thought is apt to be what can be saved in the compensation of the teachers, because this item represents about 75 per cent. of the total expenditure, and a saving here is immediate, tangible and elementary in its simplicity. A cut of 5 per cent. produces so much gross saving; a 10 per cent. reduction doubles this amount, and so on as far as figures go, making it exceedingly easy to cut the coat to fit the cloth.

It may also be suggested that certain departments are needlessly costly, and could be discontinued without serious injury to the system as a whole. Beyond this point we rarely go. In some way the crisis is tided over, and we continue as before, adding, from time to time, a little here, a little there, to our expense account in improvements and extensions, not always because these things are urged by teachers or those employed in the system, but because they are demanded by the community, or forced upon us by the growing complexity of modern life. A railroad manager knows, for example, within a comparatively narrow margin, what percentage of his gross or net receipts should go for operating expenses. If that rate be exceeded there is extravagance. If it be unduly diminished the physical condition of his road is being impaired. We know only that the average cost per pupil varies from year to year, with a distinct tendency to advance. We may not be able to tell just what it should cost in dollars and cents to instruct children in any given subject, nor what the flat returns are from that instruction, as it eventually benefits or fails to benefit the community at large, but a study could be made of the several departments under our charge, and an estimate formed of what they accomplish of real value to the system as a whole. Such studies or investigations carried on carefully and persistently for a series of years should prove of material assistance in the determination of future policies. Why should not a careful examination of the units of our system yield valuable information? We now have sixty-four grammar schools. The average cost per pupil in the grammar schools for the last financial year was $34.72. Now if this average cost is largely exceeded in certain schools, what is the reason for it, and is it a good and sufficient reason? The great steel corporation carefully ascertains the cost of production at its various plants, and insists upon the reduction of unnecessary expense wherever it may be discovered, and its methods in this respect could well be applied to school administration problems.

To illustrate: Suppose it be found that the cost per pupil in a certain school largely exceeds the average cost in other schools; does this not indicate that some local economies might well be effected? Of course a considerable variation might properly exist owing to the fact that more teachers in one district than in another, because of long service, are drawing the maximum salary of their rank, and, if such be the case, there is no more to be said; but other and less satisfactory reasons may be operative. The coal consumption may be excessive; there may be an undue number of special assistants and temporary teachers; the organization itself may be extravagant and wasteful where it should be efficient and economical; or a variety of causes may operate to bring about an excess of cost, all of which may be corrected under proper methods of inspection and control. Of course the location of the day-school plant is fixed; but, so far as the evening schools are concerned, it might be found that the occupancy of one building in preference to another in the same neighborhood was economical or the reverse. It is true that the adoption of methods of this general character, with others which would naturally follow, would in themselves involve considerable expense; but we believe the results which might reasonably be expected from them would be of sufficient value to justify any reasonable expenditure in this direction.

A great deal of attention has been paid for years to improving methods of instruction and discipline with a view to increasing the educational efficiency of the schools, and no one questions that this time and effort have been well expended. Investigation and comparison of methods of organization as illustrated in the different schools and departments of the system, continued systematically from year to year with particular reference to cost, should be equally productive in a more material way.

GROUP SYSTEM OF PROMOTION IN PRIMARY AND GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

The public school system is not infrequently compared to a great machine fed by a continuous stream of children who pass more or less automatically through its various convolutions, and emerge in a prescribed number of years equipped with a greater or less amount of knowledge. It is criticised because it groups its pupils into too large classes and pays too little attention to the needs of the individual; yet the constant tendency is towards smaller classes, and progress in this direction is checked only by financial considerations. It costs the city a certain amount for each pupil who passes through the school system, beginning with the kindergarten and ending with the Latin, high or normal school. The longer a pupil remains, the greater the expense. If his passage can be shortened without detriment to himself, the greater the gain both to the community and the child.

A plan to accomplish this end, which your committee believe could be put into operation to the advantage of the system and the pupils as well, was suggested last year, the salient features of which, from a financial point of view, may be summarized as follows:

DIAGRAM.

Let the line A B represent the amount of work outlined in the established course of study. If this is divided into nine equal parts, each division, 1a, 2a, etc., will represent the work done in one year. The recommended plan proposes that the more able pupils shall be kept in separate groups and allowed to work faster than the slower ones. At the end of the first year such pupils will have completed more than the slower section as shown by the distance marked 1b on the line C D. By the end of the first year they will have completed the regular first grade work and made some start upon second grade work. If kept in a separate section during the second year, they can complete the regular second grade work and make a larger advance upon third. Since the purpose is to have them gain one year in eight, their entire course is represented by the line C D, and the amount of gain will thus average five weeks per year.

After such a system is in full operation, there will be in each room two groups of approximately twenty-five each; for example, 6a and 6b, or 6a and 5b. From this condition various advantageous results arise:

Under the proposed grouping neither the point of beginning nor the point of ending with any particular group is arbitrarily determined in advance. Neither is the amount of work determined for the purpose of fitting the average pupil, nor by any exigencies of administration, but solely by the educational needs and educational possibilities of the particular group under consideration. Each teacher may begin with each group of children where she finds them, give them the instruction fitted to their needs, and take them as far as they can go with profit.

The division into grades is determined by financial conditions, and the number of pupils assigned to each teacher has been set at fifty. Under the proposed plan, when once fifty children have been assigned to a room, they may be made into groups, with no other consideration than that of placing together those who can most nearly progress at the same rate of speed.

The plan provides for a close assorting into groups containing pupils of the same ability and rapidity of acquisition. At any given time of the year, instead of nine grades, a school will have its pupils assigned to at least seventeen groups, having different degrees of advancement. This provides many easy gradations, renders possible transfers from group to group, and avoids the tremendous loss often entailed by compelling a pupil to repeat an entire year's work. For example, a pupil in 4b doing work which, though fair, is not sufficient to enable him to proceed with 5b, will not be required to repeat the entire work of 4b, but will be promoted to 5a. This will transfer him to another teacher and place him with a class working at a slower rate of speed. Furthermore, he will repeat in 5a the latter half of the work covered in 4b, an amount of review sufficient to enable him to maintain himself.

The plan recognizes the principle that some children can with profit go faster than others, and provides a way by which the abler pupils may shorten the time in the grammar school by one year. Its adoption will furnish a satisfactory solution of the question of reducing the number of grades to eight.

Furthermore, it should be emphasized that this gain of one year made by the bright pupils is distributed over the entire course; that is, the pupil does all the work at a slightly increased rate of speed.

In so far as it enables pupils to complete the course in less time, the plan would save money for the city. It is impossible to say what proportion of the pupils will be able to shorten the time in the grammar school. In some districts the proportion will be much higher than in others, but by the flexibility of the system each school could adapt its work to the needs of its pupils. Observation of schools working under the system leads to the belief that after it has been in operation long enough to enable pupils to profit by its advantages through their entire school course, at least 60 per cent. of the pupils will cover the work in eight years.

Undoubtedly the saving of a year will be of much financial advantage to parents upon whom the burden of sending their children to school rests heavily. This saving of a year will increase the number of grammar school graduates by enabling some of those who can attend but eight years to complete the entire course. The bulk of experience the country over has shown that the system, once established, is practical and effective.

A fuller and more complete explanation of the foregoing plan and of its educational advantages appears in the supplement to the report of the Superintendent for 1904, pages 73-82.

The average cost per pupil per annum in the grammar schools during the past six years has been $34.69. Had 60 per cent. of the 4,387 pupils in the ninth grade last June been able to save the one year's time contemplated by the plan above described, the city would have gained about $91,000. This gain would be an annual one as successive groups of pupils pass through the grades, and would increase in proportion with the natural growth of the school system. As to the estimate of the number of pupils who would profit by this plan, it may be said that in another city where a somewhat less desirable and flexible scheme to the same end is in operation, experience has shown conclusively that the saving is at least as great as this estimate.

COST OF BOOKS, DRAWING MATERIALS AND STATIONERY.

A study of certain regular expenditures that bear, or should bear, a close relation to the number of pupils in the schools, should yield valuable results in determining whether or not the cost of a given item or items is at a normal rate from year to year. To illustrate: The cost of books, drawing materials and stationery would naturally vary according to the number of pupils, but an examination of this item for a period of five years discloses some interesting features, as shown by the following table:

Books, Drawing Materials and Stationery.

YEAR.	Total Cost.	Total Pupils Day and Evening.	Increased Expense in Per cent.	Increase in No. of Pupils in Per cent.
1900-01.....	$85,868 28	88,852	5.8	2.5
1901-02.....	94,728 91	91,271	11.0	2.7
1902-03.....	105,967 89	94,871	11.9	3.9
1903-04.....	71,181 69	99,138	* 22.9	4.5
1904-05.....	72,096 87	102,735	1.4	3.6

* Decrease.

It appears that for the first three years covered by the above statement the cost of books and stationery increased in an ascending ratio largely exceeding the gain in pupils. In 1903-04 this item shows a very large decrease, followed in the succeeding year by a small increase. It is evident that a great saving was made in one particular year, and doubtless for good reasons, but if all items of expenditures could be graphically portrayed by charts, any marked and abnormal variation in the curve showing the expenditure for any particular purpose would readily be noted, and the reason for it could then be ascertained, thus tending to ensure a harmonious increase or decrease in all departments.

We would recommend that all text, reference and supplementary books be charged to the principals of the schools or districts concerned, and not to individual teachers. This plan would, we think, not only simplify the accounts, but would place the responsibility for such material where it belongs and tend to economy, as the principals would then be able better to watch the stock of books on hand in their respective districts, and a surplus in the hands of one teacher could be more readily transferred to meet a demand on the part of another instructor in the same district.

COMPENSATION AND EFFICIENCY OF INSTRUCTORS.

It is to the manifest advantage of each individual teacher that the highest degree of efficiency in the force be maintained from purely selfish motives, if for no higher reason. The employment of incompetent or inefficient instructors who cannot properly govern and instruct a full quota of pupils tends to increase the number of teachers employed, and, indirectly, to decrease the compensation of all those employed in the service. As the late Mayor Collins once said, the city does not own the purse of Fortunatus, and as the amount that can be expended for the salaries of instructors is, and always will be, subject to pretty well defined limitations, the more there are employed, the less the individual will be paid. On the other hand, too few teachers means a serious impairment of the service rendered the pupil, and a consequent deterioration in the product of the system.

It is probably impossible to prevent surplus instructors, or to quote the language of the regulations, "teachers for whose continued service no special necessity exists," from accumulating in the system to some extent, but every regular grade teacher appointed costs the system at least $552 a year, and a distinct saving would result from transferring to the first available vacancy a teacher already in the service who is not actually needed in the place she occupies, instead of employing a new one.

As an example of how a slight and apparently trivial change grows in a short time to large proportions, the following illustration is given:

Special Assistants.

On May 27, 1902, the rules were amended to provide that special assistants might be appointed in any grade, grammar or primary, the previous rule permitting such appointments only in the first grade. The estimated expense of the change was from $8,000 to $10,000. The actual expense has been as follows:

YEAR.	Number of Regular Grade Teachers.	Increase over Preceding Year.	COST OF SPECIAL ASSISTANTS.
			Grammar.	Primary.	Total.
1897-98.....	1,331	47	$7,414 00	$7,414 00
1898-99.....	1,381	50	7,961 50	7,961 50
1899-1900.....	1,406	25	9,497 50	9,497 50
1900-01.....	1,501	95	11,035 50	11,035 50
1901-02.....	1,586	85	10,847 25	10,847 25
		A v. 60
1902-03.....	1,653	67	$1,888 00	12,501 00	13,889 00
1903-04.....	1,674	21	7,898 50	11,423 25	18,821 75
1904-05.....	1,710	36	17,580 64	16,209 25	33,789 89
		A v. 41

The average number of permanent teachers appointed during the past three years is nineteen less than for the preceding five years. If this number of teachers were appointed, say on their second year, the expense would be $11,400 for one year. Deduct this amount from $33,739.89, and the remainder, $22,339.89, would appear to be the present cost of special assistants as compared with $10,000 or $11,000 four years ago.

COST PER PUPIL.

The following statement shows the cost per pupil in the various grades of schools for the year 1904-05 as compared with 1894-95, ten years previous:

	High.	Grammar.	Primary.	Kinder- garten.	Evening.	Evening Drawing.
1894-95.....	$22 91	$29 98	$19 73	$25 40	$10 59	$26 09
1904-05.....	95 91	34 75	28 64	29 18	11 81	29 89

Expressed in percentages, these increases show a wide variation, which is not fully to be accounted for by changes in the schedule of salaries of instructors, for example:

	High.	Grammar.	Primary.	Kinder- garten.	Evening.	Evening Drawing.
Increased cost per pupil.....	15.7	15.9	45.2	14.9	11.5	12.6

It would therefore appear that while the cost per pupil in the high and grammar schools and kindergartens has increased at a nearly uniform rate, the cost per pupil in the primary schools has increased to a far greater extent. It would also seem to indicate that in the development and extension of their work the evening schools and evening drawing schools have hardly kept pace with the day schools.

EMPLOYMENT OF CLERKS IN HIGH AND GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.

The exercise of a false economy usually results in an ultimate cost far greater than would be caused by a business-like dealing with the proposition involved. If a $1,000 employee is made to devote his time to work that can be done equally well by one who is paid but $500, the waste is considerable, not alone so far as the direct expenditure of money is concerned, but also in the indirect loss to the employer of the benefit of the growth in skill and ability of the better paid man who can do ordinary routine work no better than the person drawing half his salary. The head-masters of our high schools are paid $3,780 per annum. The salary of a grammar master ranges from a minimum of $2,580 to a maximum of $3,180. Obviously the time of these principals is far too valuable to be spent in the preparation of routine reports and correspondence, nor is it true economy to require such service of their assistants who could be far more profitably employed in teaching. The growing complexity of the system results in constantly increasing demands for reports and statistics. Requirements of this nature, which are neither unnecessary nor unreasonable, never diminish, but tend always to increase in number. The principals of the various schools, especially the head-masters of high schools, have long felt that little if any part of their time should be devoted to merely clerical work, and yet of necessity they have been obliged to spend time and effort in this direction that could far better be expended in the discharge of administrative duties. There are now twelve high and Latin schools, seven of which have severally more than five hundred pupils in attendance, and two more than one thousand. The clerical work connected with the administration of such schools, especially under the elective system of study now in effect, is enormous. Yet not one of these schools has a clerk to attend to such matters. One principal who strongly urged that his school be allowed a matron intimated that such an appointment would probably result in certain of his instructors giving more time to teaching and less time to making out reports and statistics.

Would it not be true economy to employ a clerk in each of these schools where instructors are necessarily required to render clerical service, and thus free principal and teachers for other and more important duties which they are really employed to discharge? If it should then be discovered that instructors whose time is not fully occupied are serving in any school, such readjustment should be made as might be found necessary by transfers or reassignment of duties. The adoption of such a plan would tend to reduce the expenditure for salaries of instructors by enabling those already employed to devote their whole time to teaching.

The same argument applies with scarcely less force to the grade schools. There are now sixty-four grammar districts. In ten of these districts there are severally from 700 to 1,000 pupils, in 38 from 1,000 to 1,500 pupils, in 10 from 1,500 to 2,000 pupils, and 6 have more than 2,000 pupils. The regulations prescribe that the principals shall have special charge of the ninth grade; shall give an average of at least two hours a day to instruction; shall visit the primary schools and kindergartens under their charge at least once a week, and shall devote the remainder of their time to the general duties of their office. In one of these districts it would take the master over seven hours to make a call of but ten minutes on each class in his main building, and if he should spend that time in each room occupied by grammar and primary classes and kindergartens throughout his district, and began his visits at 9 o'clock in the morning, he would not reach the last room until 7 o'clock that night, assuming that he kept steadily on the move and that each class remained continuously in session awaiting his call. The district used in this illustration, while in one of the suburbs, is territorially very compact, and with but short distances separating the various school buildings. The administration of such districts is a task demanding tact, skill, and efficiency, and these qualities, which our principals possess in such large measure, can be better exercised if they are relieved of simple, routine work that takes time rather than a high degree of intelligence for its execution.

GAS AND ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Twenty years ago the cost of lighting of school buildings was an insignificant item, but of late years the cost of such service has rapidly increased. Last year there was expended for gas and electric lighting more than $28,000, and that amount will probably be considerably exceeded this year. Here again the trouble and expense of putting into operation a system whereby the cost of this item in the various buildings, making due allowances for size, location, and whether or not occupied by evening classes, could be given critical and continued examination, would probably be fully justified, especially with relation to the use of electricity, for there is a certain "fatal facility" in turning on an incandescent bulb that tempts even the most careful person to an unnecessary use of this modern convenience. A morning visit to a class occupying a well lighted room having an easterly exposure in one of our school buildings found the window curtains closely drawn to exclude the rays of the morning sun, and the pupils pursuing their tasks by the aid of the full complement of electric lights—at least sixteen—with which the room was equipped. The corridors of the same building were also unnecessarily lighted by electricity, and here the lights turned off by the surprised visitor were found, on his return, to have been again turned on by unseen hands. An instance such as this of petty waste may seem a trifling thing, and yet the change of a mere fraction of a cent in rate diverts the course of mighty streams of traffic, and one enterprise fails and another succeeds because the latter practices small economies while the former does not. We are informed that in a large building in another city it has been found that a distinct saving has resulted from the employment of a man whose sole duty it is to patrol the various rooms and corridors, turning off, as he goes his rounds, each light that is not actually needed for some definite purpose. This plan may not be adapted to our conditions, but it shows how the problem of securing economy in the use of electric light has been met elsewhere.

FUEL.

It would seem desirable to place a direct responsibility in the furnishing of fuel upon the Schoolhouse Custodian, and to require that officer to exercise a careful oversight of its consumption in each building. The production of a maximum number of heat units from a given quantity of coal depends largely upon careful firing, and as not all janitors are equally skilled in this portion of their duties, a comparison of the methods of those who succeed in sufficiently heating their buildings with a minimum quantity of coal might be utilized for the benefit of all. During the last financial year there was sent to the different schools 21,386 tons of coal which cost $123,870.48. Ten years ago the average consumption of coal per pupil was 363 pounds. Last year the average consumption was 416 pounds per pupil. This increase, no doubt, is largely due to the adoption of modern methods of heating and ventilation, but it would be well to adopt a system that would disclose whether or not the consumption in any particular building is excessive. If ample provision were made to house in each school building a full year's supply of fuel, there would undoubtedly be a considerable saving of labor and expense, a saving that would continue from year to year as long as the building is in use, and thus justify a slight additional initial expense in the providing of such accommodations.

SUMMARY.

These are merely superficial comments intended to indicate what might be accomplished by the adoption of a system of comparison and reference by which the comparative and actual cost not only of educating a pupil, but also of the various departments, could be ascertained and traced from year to year, thus aiding in determining whether the cost is justified by results, and whether the expenditure for any given purpose bears a just proportion to the cost of the whole system, and, further, whether such cost is increasing or decreasing, and at what rate.

If our school system is to remain a living, vital force; if it is to accomplish fully the purpose for which it was created and is maintained, it must conform to the two essentials governing the conduct of all successful modern business enterprises — economy and efficiency.

SHRINKAGE IN NUMBER OF PUPILS BETWEEN THE PRIMARY AND HIGH SCHOOLS.

It is perhaps generally assumed that most of the pupils who enter the primary schools ultimately are graduated from the grammar schools, and, in view of the striking and interesting growth of our high schools during recent years, that a very considerable number continue in the system until the completion of a three or four years' course in the high schools. How far this is from the truth a glance at the chart upon the opposite page will disclose. This chart first appeared in another report (Document No. 3, 1905, page 65), and was plotted to show the loss in attendance during the progress of a body of pupils who might have entered the first grade of our primary schools in 1892, and have been graduated at the end of a three years' course in the high schools in 1903. The figures, which were taken from the official statistics, show clearly the loss in attendance which here takes place after January, 1897, when, in the sixth grade, many pupils reach the age when school attendance is no longer compulsory, and enter industrial life.

If this chart correctly reveals the real situation, it certainly indicates the importance of concentrating the most earnest and intelligent study on means and methods by which those pupils who do not progress beyond the grammar schools may acquire such essentials of education as will best fit them to meet the conditions that must inevitably confront them at an early age. The voice of the industrial and commercial world sounds no uncertain summons to the boys and girls of to-day, and many of them must obey at an early age. If the boy born in the country responds to the call of the city, still more does the urban boy feel the influences that draw him from school to the inexorable necessity of gaining a livelihood in an era of sharp competition. The public school system that can best equip him for his place in life is what he has a right to demand, and upon us rests the responsibility of meeting his reasonable requirements.

APPROPRIATIONS.

Under the present system of making appropriations for meeting the current expense of school maintenance, which is based upon the taxable valuation of the city, and not on the number of pupils, it is practically impossible to frame an annual budget in pursuance of a definite policy of developing the school system along certain lines for a number of years. If through a marked increase in the average valuation of the city during one period the school appropriation is swelled sufficiently to allow some little extension and expansion, a lower rate of increase in subsequent years, making it necessary to retrench and curb expenditures to meet such conditions, emphasizes the difficulty of regulating expenditures to conform to appropriations depending upon changes in property valuations. The school population grows from year to year without any reference to changes in the taxable valuation of the city, and if the increase in valuation fails to keep pace with the additional number of pupils, it follows that the amount to be expended for the benefit of the individual pupil decreases, and that the efficiency of the whole system, as measured by expenditures, is also diminished. If the appropriation increased in the same ratio as the number of pupils, about $30,000 additional would have been available for each of the two last years, making a total of $60,000 to meet the increasing cost of the school system.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

It will of course be necessary to recast the present rules of the Board to conform to the new conditions that will attend the reorganization of the School Committee in January next.

We would suggest that at the same time it would be highly desirable to rearrange the regulations which relate to the general conduct of the schools, and prescribe the duties of instructors and other persons in the employ of the Board not included under the designation of officers. The present regulations, admirable in many respects, and the fruit of long experience and careful study, are not well arranged, nor in all respects harmonious. They have been subjected to so many amendments that the original pattern upon which they were framed has largely disappeared, and diligent search is sometimes necessary before those who consult them, and upon whom they are supposed to be binding, can be altogether positive of some of their requirements. It would add largely to the convenience of all persons in the service having occasion to refer to them if these regulations should be rearranged, codified, and, if possible, simplified.

Another suggestion in this same connection we deem worth the making. When the Board has once adopted a satisfactory set of rules and regulations it should, so far as possible, abstain from changing them, and, more important still, insist that they shall be implicitly observed. The practice in past years has tended to so many changes that few persons in the system have been able to keep well informed with regard to them. For example, in one year the rules were amended twenty-three times, in another year twenty-five times, and so on. The natural result has been to minimize their importance and to decrease the respect in which they are held. Any regulation once adopted should be impartially and consistently enforced, and violations thereof should not be allowed to pass unnoticed and unproved.

Such a policy is peculiarly essential in Boston because of the manner in which its school system has developed. In former years, largely because of the annexation of neighboring municipalities each jealous of its own school traditions, and under the old system of practical school control by small division committees, many of the schools were in effect "petty duchies" belonging, it is true, to a general federation, but clinging tenaciously to what might be termed "ancient rights and privileges." Little by little the doctrine of centralization has prevailed, the bands that hold the schools and districts together have been strengthened, the different units brought into close and harmonious relations, until to-day the whole system is far more homogeneous than ever before, to its great and manifest advantage.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS vs. PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

It is interesting to note that the number of children of school age, which for statistical purposes is between five and fifteen years, who attend the public schools, as compared with those of the same ages who attend the private schools, preserves a fairly constant ratio from year to year.

As the city grows in population and wealth, it is natural to expect that the number of pupils in private schools will increase rapidly, unless the public school system is performing its functions to the community in a manner to merit its respect and confidence. The following statement, however, which has been compiled from the annual school census returns for the past ten years, shows that the private schools contain about one-fifth as many children as the public schools, and that this proportion varies but little from year to year :

SCHOOL CENSUS.

Children 5 to 15 Years.

CENSUS TAKEN.	Number in Public Schools.	Number in Pri- vate Schools.	Relation of Private to Pub- lic School Membership in Per cent.
May, 1896.....	58,783	12,231	20.8
May, 1897.....	61,850	12,272	19.8
May, 1898.....	63,498	12,681	19.9
September, 1899.....	66,221	13,515	20.4
September, 1900.....	69,260	14,083	20.3
September, 1901.....	72,257	14,051	19.4
September, 1902.....	71,532	15,601	21.8
September, 1903.....	74,812	16,254	21.8
September, 1904.....	75,376	16,090	21.3
September, 1905.....	75,368	15,913	21.1

The figures above presented would seem to indicate that although the public school system does not meet the requirements of a considerable number of people who for one reason or another may prefer to send their children to private schools, yet during a period of ten years there has developed no new or strong current of opinion to draw pupils from the public to the private schools.

Mr. John O. Norris, head-master of the Charlestown High School, who died June 14, 1905, was born at Chester, N. H., November 22, 1843. Mr. Norris entered the Boston service as usher in the Brimmer School in December, 1868; was appointed sub-master in the English High School in December, 1870, and as master, in the same school, was in charge of its branch in East Boston. He organized and was the first principal of the East Boston High School, and became head-master of the Charlestown High School September 7, 1885. His useful activities were not confined alone to his school. For ten years he served as Chairman of the School Committee of Melrose, where he lived. He was prominent both as a member and as a speaker in various educational and religious clubs and associations. His absolute integrity and fidelity to duty were characteristics that added essentially to his success as a master, and potent influences in obtaining and holding the friendship and esteem of those with whom he came in contact.

Miss Sarah J. Baker, principal of the Dillaway District, died March 11, 1905. Miss Baker became principal of the Dudley School for girls (later the Dillaway School), in Roxbury, in 1861, continuing as such after the annexation of Roxbury in 1868, and was at the time of her death the senior grammar master in point of service in that position. She was the first, and for many years the only, woman holding the position of principal of a grammar district in this city, and administered the interests committed to her care with marked ability and zeal. Of refined character, dignified in deportment, well equipped in all the qualities essential to success in her profession, Miss Baker achieved an enviable reputation for herself and her school, and enjoyed not only the affection of her pupils and teachers, but the confidence and esteem of the community whose educational interests were her constant and unremitting care. She was able to continue the work in which she so delighted until very near her end, and departed, loved, honored, and respected, leaving a record of a noble life to inspire those who knew her best.

Just as the year and the term of the present Board were drawing to a close came the unexpected and melancholy tidings of the death of Superintendent Conley, which took place on December 20. Only the day before he had been at his office, attending to the customary routine of his duties, apparently in full health and vigor. The dread summons came to him in the prime of life, when years of splendid fruition seemed to stretch before him.

Dr. George H. Conley was born in Lowell, Mass., October 11, 1853, and received his early education in the public schools of that city. He was graduated from the College of the Holy Cross in the class of 1874, and was recently honored by his alma mater with the degree of LL.D. Subsequently he attended the seminary of St. Sulpice, in Montreal, and spent some time in travel and study in Europe. He then became master of the Horace Mann Grammar School in Lowell, and was later transferred to a similar position in the Benjamin F. Butler School of that city. He was elected Superintendent of the Public Schools in Lowell in 1883, and resigned in 1886 to become a member of the Board of Supervisors of the Boston Public Schools, to which position he was elected on March 9 of that year. On September 1, 1904, he assumed the duties of Superintendent of the Public Schools of Boston, having been elected thereto in the preceding July.

He was President of the Middlesex County Teachers' Association in 1885. For many years he was active in the work of the National Educational Association, especially in the Department of Superintendence, in which he held high office. He had been a member of the Massachusetts State Board of Education since 1893. He was lately honored by Tufts College, which conferred upon him the degree of Litt. D.

It is difficult to speak adequately of Dr. Conley's personal and educational qualities. He was a gentleman of the finest instincts, an accomplished scholar, a faithful public officer, a wise and admirably equipped educational leader.

Generous, whole-souled, and genial, always courteous in bearing, ever considerate of the rights and feelings of others, the personal attributes that win the love and respect of our fellows were his in largest measure, and beneath all there was a character of solid worth, actuated only by the highest principles of morality, honesty and justice.

He brought to the position of Superintendent sound scholarship, long experience, and the ripened judgment of a mature mind in the full zenith of its powers. His extended service as Supervisor necessarily gave him an intimate acquaintance with our public schools, and strengthened his grasp upon the many problems that continually present themselves in the administration of a large school system. He was always easily master of his work, and his mental horizon was wide enough to enable him to discharge with unfailing skill and sagacity the manifold duties and responsibilities that rested upon him.

Respectfully submitted,

MARY A. DIERKES,

Chairman,

JOHN D. DRUM,

FRANCIS W. FALVEY.

COMMITTEE ON ACCOUNTS.

THIRTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL REPORT.

COMMITTEE ON ACCOUNTS.

Boston, March, 1906.

To the School Committee :

The Committee on Accounts submit the following report for the financial year 1904-05, together with the detailed account of expenditures furnished by the Auditing Clerk as required by the School Board.

The appropriations for the support of the public schools are made in accordance with chapter 448 of the Acts of 1901, which allows the School Committee to appropriate each year the unexpended balance of the preceding year, the estimated income to be collected during the year, and $3.40 upon each $1,000 of the average taxable valuation of the city, the amount of said valuation being furnished by the Board of Assessors, and the same as is used by the City Council in making its appropriations.

Should the School Committee appropriate the full amount granted by law, forty cents out of the rate allowed must be appropriated solely for new school buildings, lands, yards, and furnishings, and not less than twenty-five cents also out of the rate, solely for repairs and alterations of school buildings. Thus it will be seen that the School Committee can only appropriate for expenditures under its control $2.75 on each $1,000 of the taxable valuation, and out of this, up to May 25, 1904, the School Committee has been obliged by law to appropriate an amount sufficient to pay the salaries and necessary expenses of the Schoolhouse Commission, about $25,000 per annum. By the passage of chapter 376 of the Acts of 1904, the School Committee was relieved of this expense. After the passage of this act, the Schoolhouse Commission turned over to the School Committee the unexpended balance of the appropriation for salaries and expenses, amounting to $12,694.27, of which $8,685.61 was transferred to salaries of instructors. The balance, $4,008.66, was transferred to the appropriation for school-houses to satisfy an execution of court, for which no other money seemed to be available.

The passage of the act referred to will allow the School Committee about $25,000 more each year for expenditures under its control.

In this connection it might be well to state that the School Committee was obliged, out of that portion of the rate of $3.40 per $1,000 of the valuation, viz., $2.75, available for expenditures under their control, to appropriate last year $50,000 for hired school accommodations, which sum was turned over to the Schoolhouse Commission to pay rents incurred by them on account of lack of school buildings.

Under date of March 8, 1904, on the recommendation of this committee, the School Committee approved the budget of expenses as presented for the year 1904-05, the entire amount available having been appropriated, with the exception of the amount allowed for new school buildings.

Later during the year items of expense, not included in the budget, were authorized, and expenses to the extent of nearly $5,000 incurred. This, together with the unexpected increase in the consumption of coal, resulted in a shortage of funds for the closing month of the year. While the shortage was insignificant as compared with the total expenditure, it added to the appropriation for the succeeding year. The appropriation having been exhausted, it was necessary to transfer unexpended balances from one item of the appropriation to some other item, in order to balance the accounts.

The ordinary expenses for the past year were as follows :

Salaries of instructors	$2,631,358 47
Salaries of officers	81,923 58
Salaries of janitors	212,423 76
Fuel and light	159,164 65

Supplies and incidentals :

Books	$41,975 48
Printing	11,311 14
Stationery and drawing materials	30,781 39
Miscellaneous items	94,495 14
	<hr/> 178,563 15
School-house repairs, rents, etc.	357,305 73
	<hr/>
Expended from appropriation	$3,620,739 34
From income of Gibson and other funds	2,644 10
	<hr/>
Total expenditure	$3,623,383 44
Total income	57,213 81
	<hr/>
Net expenditure	$3,566,169 63
Net expenditure brought down	$3,566,169 63
Cost of new school-houses (special)	2,114,851 23
Total net cost	$5,681,020 86

The committee, in preparing the estimates, stated that the probable income would be as follows :

Non-residents, State and City	$20,000 00
Trust-funds and other sources	24,000 00
Total estimated income	$44,000 00

The ordinary income collected in addition to the amount received on account of the tax levy proved to be as follows :

Non-residents, State and City	$22,840 33
Trust-funds, etc.	29,327 35
Sale of books	660 00
Sale of badges to licensed minors	613 75
State of Massachusetts, travelling expenses pupils in Horace Mann School	3,351 58
Sale of old material, etc.	420 80
Total income	$57,213 81

Of the income collected, $5,415.35 was received on account of the Gibson and other funds, which amount was available for and limited to expenditures under the provisions of these funds.

The balance, $51,798.46 (less the amount estimated at the beginning of the year, $44,000), has been carried forward, and is included in the amount that the School Committee can appropriate and expend for general purposes during the year 1905-06.

The net ordinary expenses, compared with those for 1903-04, show an increase of $56,021.62.

The average number of pupils belonging to the different grades the past year was 102,725. The average cost per pupil amounted to $34.72, a decrease, as compared with that for the previous year, of sixty-nine cents per pupil.

The gross expenses, compared with those for 1903-1904, show a variation in the different items of the appropriation as follows:

Salaries of instructors increased	$102,180 68
Salaries of janitors increased	15,506 32
Supplies and incidentals increased	11,499 01
	<hr/>
	$129,186 01
Fuel and light decreased	$55,498 72
Salaries of officers decreased	419 24
	<hr/>
	55,917 96
Total increase, gross	$73,268 05

The following shows the variation in the number of pupils and in salaries in the different grades for the past year, compared with 1903-04 :

High Schools, pupils increased 469, salaries increased	$24,030 22
Grammar Schools, pupils increased 1,994, salaries increased	30,495 57
Primary Schools, pupils increased 178, salaries increased	14,416 38
Horace Mann School, pupils increased 3, salaries increased	487 87
Kindergartens, pupils increased 258, salaries increased	7,037 18
Evening Schools, pupils increased 768, salaries increased	9,350 50
	$85,817 72
Evening Drawing Schools, pupils decreased 79, salaries decreased	909 00
	<hr/>
	$84,908 72
Manual Training Schools, salaries increased	4,597 65
Special teachers, not included above, salaries increased	12,674 31
Spectacle Island and special classes, pupils increased 1.
Total increase in pupils, 3,592 ; in salaries	$102,180 68

The number of instructors, including 22 teachers on half pay, on the pay-rolls January 1, 1905, was 2,204, divided among the several grades of schools as follows : High Schools, 234 ; Grammar Schools, 1,005 ; Primary Schools, 705 ; Horace Mann School, 15 ; Kindergartens, 178 ; Manual Training, including Cookery, 67, making an increase of 57 instructors since January 1, 1904.

In addition there have been 101 temporary teachers and 201 special assistants employed in the day schools, an average of 329 instructors in the Evening and Evening Drawing Schools, and 131 special instructors, including 49 teachers of sewing, making a total of 2,966 instructors on the pay-rolls during the year.

The amount paid for salaries of instructors the past year was $2,631,358.47, an increase over the previous year of $102,180.68, and varying but slightly from the increase the year previous.

Ten years ago the cost for this item was $1,531,630.15, showing an average yearly increase of $109,972.83 during that period. The number of pupils increased but 40 per cent., while the cost for salaries of instructors increased 72 per cent.

For the financial year 1894-95 teachers received $20.81 for each pupil instructed, as compared with $25.62 paid the past year.

In compliance with the rules, 2,146 cases of absence of instructors were reported by the principals on the monthly pay-rolls, varying in length of time from a half day to the entire month.

The total amount deducted from their salaries on account of absence was $27,545.46, which was slightly less than one-half of their compensation. In place of absent teachers 1,425 substitutes were employed, who received from the city for their services $21,540.64.

Under Section 179 of the Regulations of the School Committee the Superintendent may, at his discretion, grant any instructor a leave of absence not exceeding three days, in certain cases, without loss of pay.

Under this rule, during the first three months of its operation, fifty-five teachers were given leave of absence for a time, which averaged slightly over two days for each. This experience would indicate that the adoption of this rule will add between $2,000 and $3,000 yearly to the cost for instructors.

Under Section 217 of the Regulations a teacher may, with the consent of the principal of the district, be absent without loss of pay one day every three months to visit other schools, the substitute to be paid by the city.

During the year, on account of this rule, the city paid substitutes for 298 teachers thus granted leave of absence.

These two amendments, if the information gathered proves a fair criterion of their effect, will add about $4,000 annually to the cost for salaries of instructors.

For the past few years the city has received about $8,000 net each year on account of the absence of teachers. The exemption from loss of pay by the two items just mentioned probably will lessen this amount very materially.

During the past year twenty-two instructors who had devoted most of their lives to teaching, and were about to retire from the service, were given a year's leave of absence on half pay, prior to the date of resignation. This action carried with it an expense of about $15,000.

Six evening high schools (including the Mechanic Arts Evening High, which opened for the first time this year) and fourteen elementary, in various parts of the city, held their sessions as usual during the year. The number of pupils belonging was 9,875, and the cost for instructors' salaries amounted to $87,504, an increase as compared with the previous year of $9,350.50.

As compared with the financial year 1894-1895 (ten years ago), salaries of instructors in the different grades of schools have increased as follows:

	Per cent.
High schools	95.3
Grammar schools	52.2
Primary schools	70.2
Kindergartens	117.9
Horace Mann school	73.8
Manual Training schools	216.9
Evening schools	92.8
Evening Drawing schools	11.4
Special schools and special instructors	192.6
Average increase, 71.8.

During the year the city has carried on ten vacation schools with playgrounds attached, five educational centres, and has given seventeen evening courses, comprising eighty-four lectures, in various parts of the city.

Simply to continue this work on the limited scale as laid out the past year would require, as estimated by the experience gained, an annual appropriation of $42,000.

The cost per pupil for salaries paid instructors in the Normal, Latin, and High Schools the past year was as follows:

Normal School . . .	$84 90	English High School .	$88 11
Latin School . . .	103 79	Girls' High School . .	48 96
Girls' Latin School .	63 84	Mechanic Arts High
Brighton High School .	68 92	School	74 70
Charlestown High		Roxbury High School .	65 98
School	87 09	South Boston High
Dorchester High School,	46 00	School	58 01
East Boston High		West Roxbury High
School	69 11	School	70 36
Average cost, $68.00.

The average salary paid during the year to each regular

High School instructor was	$1,955 01
Grammar School instructor was	1,052 08
Primary School instructor was	837 34
Kindergarten instructor was	649 56

During the year $182,345.92 was paid for instruction by special teachers, as follows:

The number of persons employed the past year to take care of the school buildings, as engineers, janitors, substitute janitors, or matrons, was 204, and the total amount paid them for salaries was $212,423.76, an increase of $15,506.32, as compared with the year previous. This increase was due principally to the new schedule of salaries adopted by the School Board, which went into effect Jan. 1, 1904. Under the new schedule, while a few of the janitors suffered a reduction, the large majority received a greater or less increase.

The large increase allowed for certain buildings indicates that for a long time many of the janitors have been much underpaid.

While no schedule that could be devised would provide in all cases the same payment for an equal amount of service rendered, the present schedule has placed all on the same basis by a simple method of computing the rates for the different kinds of work done.

The number of buildings (including portable buildings in school yards) occupied for school purposes, was 310, and the average salary paid to each person employed by the Board for the care of these buildings was $1,041.29. Out of this amount many of the janitors pay for extra help employed by them; therefore the janitors do not average for themselves the amount stated.

The average cost for taking care of the 11 buildings used for high schools was $3,054.54.

The average cost for each of the grammar school buildings was $1,314.

The primary school buildings, varying in size from buildings containing one room to those containing eighteen rooms, represent a cost for care per annum ranging from $120 to $2,664.

On pages 43 to 47 of this report will be found a tabulated list of school buildings where the salaries paid exceed $300 per annum.

During the year the Committee on Supplies presented bills for approval, in monthly requisitions, to the amount of $337,727.80, which represented the total expenditure of the School Committee exclusive of salaries, repairs, and the building of new school-houses.

The income amounted to $4,625.33, leaving the sum of $333,102.47 as the net amount expended. Of this amount $159,164.65 was spent for fuel, including electric power and light, which was $11,164.63 more than the appropriation made for this item at the beginning of the year. The unusual and unexpectedly large increase in the consumption of coal, viz., 21,386 tons, as compared with 18,800 tons estimated, and a slight increase in the cost per ton, were responsible for exceeding the appropriation.

The net cost for supplies and incidentals was $173,937.82, of which in round numbers $100,000 might be charged to supplies and the balance to incidentals.

The question of furnishing the schools with the right kind and proper amount of material, both permanent and perishable, is a problem requiring careful consideration. Owing to the straitened condition of the finances for the past few years, the item of supplies has suffered more than any other, it having been considered a convenient department wherein to economize.

Considering that there are 300 buildings to be kept supplied with permanent material, a force of 200 janitors asking for every modern improvement in that line of work with which to keep their buildings in clean and healthful condition, 50 teachers of manual training and cookery constantly demanding material most of which is perishable, nearly 3,000 instructors who should be furnished when needed with proper equipment in the way of reference books, etc., and last, but not least, 100,000 pupils who, under the law, must be provided with text-books loaned to them, and given the supplies needed to carry out the course of study, it shows the injustice of expecting that whatever deficit appears, one year or another, shall be met by curtailing the work of this department.

To accomplish all this at an average cost of one dollar per pupil is not a great outlay, and it would be a wiser economy in the long run to increase this expenditure by 25 per cent. Even then it would not equal the increase in other directions.

Full particulars concerning the methods and cost of supplying the schools are contained in the report of the Committee on Supplies, lately published.

The appropriation made for repairs and alterations upon school buildings, including also the expenses of the School-house Commission and payments for rents, amounted to $357,305.73. The expenditures during the year were $357,305.73. For details, see pages 59 and 60 of this report.

Of the amount appropriated $50,000 was set apart for the payment of rents and taxes.

The following shows the rents, taxes, water rates, heating, lighting, and janitor's service paid for each building hired for school purposes during the year :

Under the head of new school-houses the City of Boston has expended, within the past ten years, $9,698,585.01. Ten years ago it was figured that the original cost of buildings and land for the various schools, up to January 1, 1895, amounted in the aggregate to $9,888,000. From this it will be seen that the cost the past ten years almost equals the cost to the city since Boston erected its first school-house.

The following table shows the expenditures made for carrying on the schools, exclusive of furniture, rents, repairs, and new school-houses, since the reorganization of the Board, a period of twenty-eight years and nine months:

From this table it will be seen that for the financial year just closed the running expenses, exclusive of repairs, etc., were fifty cents less for each pupil than for the year preceding.

In the following table the total expenditure, exclusive of repairs and new buildings, is divided into the five items of the appropriation, under the charge of the School Committee, showing the net amount expended for each during the past twenty-eight years and nine months:

The foregoing tables include all the running expenses of the schools, and form the basis for computing the cost for each pupil. The total for last year, compared with the year previous, shows a decrease of sixty-nine cents in the rate per pupil.

Later in this report the expenditures for each grade of schools are shown, but include only such as were chargeable directly to the different grades. In addition there are certain expenses incurred for the schools as a whole, such as cost of supervision, salaries of officers and directors of special studies, manual training expenses, printing, and similar expenditures, which amounted to $352,179.71.

In like manner, a certain part of the income collected, amounting to $29,748.15, was received for the schools in general, and not for any particular grade.

The different grades of schools have been charged with the general expenses, and credited with the income received on account of the schools as a whole, as follows:

	General Expenses.	General Income.
High Schools	$71,153 49	$6,010 24

The pupils attending the Manual Training Schools, Educational Centres, and Vacation Schools are not counted in the number of pupils that go to make up the cost per pupil, as most of them attend some other grade.

Early in February and September, blanks were sent to the schools requesting each principal to make a return of the names of all non-resident pupils in his school or district, accompanied by pledges agreeing to pay tuition, signed by parents or guardians. Bills were made out from these returns requiring payment within a certain time, otherwise the pupil was dismissed from school. The tuition charged the past year was, for a Normal, Latin, or High School pupil, $97.84; for a Grammar pupil, $35.90; for a Primary pupil, $28.77.

The amount collected from this source was as follows:

69 Normal, Latin, and High School pupils	.	.	$5,654	76
7 Grammar School pupils	.	.	215	40
				$5,870

In addition to the above, $16,970.17 was received for tuition of 134 pupils in the Horace Mann School from the State of Massachusetts.

The total amount received by the city for pupils educated in our schools during the year was $22,840.33.

Under the rules this committee is obliged to prepare and present to the Board, on or before the second regular meeting of the Board in February, an itemized appropriation order to cover expenses for the financial year. In accordance, the committee prepared estimates, and was confronted with the fact that the money available under the law would not be sufficient to meet expenses as the schools are at present carried on.

A conservative estimate of the needs of the schools calls for $60,000 more than can be appropriated. Each part of the school system has its friends, and if a reduction be suggested in any one branch it is opposed immediately by those who believe the cut should be made in some other direction.

Your committee believes, from previous experience, that it would be useless to attempt a reduction in the corps of special instructors, but it is hoped that no more will be appointed during the present financial year. No money was appropriated for Vacation Schools, as it is inexpedient to continue them under the present stringency.

Your committee has apportioned the amount available. Any additional expense will imperil the salaries of instructors.

Your committee invite attention to the following pages of this report, which give in detail the expenditures for the financial year 1904-05.

Respectfully submitted,

Chairman,

REPORT.

To the School Committee :

I have the honor to submit my first report as Superintendent of Public Schools for the year ending March 1, 1905. This is the twenty-fifth annual report of the current series. Prior to 1881 the reports of the Superintendent were issued semi-annually, the last of which, number thirty-seven, was dated March 1, 1880.

I began the discharge of the duties of the office of Superintendent on September 1, 1904, and immediately entered upon the work of organizing the new schools and school districts and providing for the large number of new pupils. When the schools were opened on September 14, the provisions made were found fully equal to the demand. At the end of the first week of the school term the organization of the schools was practically complete, and all children of school age who applied for admission had been received and furnished with accommodation.

On October 1, 1904, it appeared from the reports of the principals that there were only seventeen applicants for admission to the primary schools for whom there was at that time no room. No other pupils, above the kindergarten age, were known to be waiting for admission to school and to be excluded therefrom on account of lack of accommodation, and none of these applicants were of compulsory school age.

These primary pupils, together with many kindergarten pupils, were speedily provided with seats and furnished with instruction.

SCHOOL ACCOMMODATIONS.

In the regular day schools the whole number of pupils belonging on January 31, 1905, was 92,085, an increase of 3,332 over the corresponding number for the previous year. This exceeded the average increase for the four years immediately preceding by 853.

In the same schools the average number of pupils belonging during the half year which ended on January 31, 1905, was 91,936. This was greater by 2,899 than the corresponding number for the previous year, and exceeded the average increase for the four years immediately preceding by 431.

These additional pupils were provided with accommodation by establishing three new grammar schools, twelve new primary classes, and six new kindergartens. For their instruction the teaching force was increased as follows: Normal School, 3 teachers; Latin and High schools, 7 teachers; grammar schools, 40 teachers; primary schools, 12 teachers; kindergartens, 4 teachers; total, 66 teachers, not counting seventeen new instructors in special subjects, who were unassigned to particular schools. In the districts where a surplus of children reported at the schools nearest to their homes the congestion was relieved by transfers to other schools conveniently located where accommodations were available.

In order to provide for the large increase in attendance at the Normal School it was necessary to transfer classes from the Rice Training School to the Public Latin School building, and to the Dwight Grammar School, where rooms were available.

For several years it has been impossible to accommodate all applicants for admission to the Mechanic Arts High School. In September last there were seventy-three applicants for the first-year class who could not be admitted. These were placed on a waiting list and accommodated in other high schools. During the year about a third of these pupils entered the Mechanic Arts High School as vacancies therein occurred. It has also been necessary to reject all non-residents and a large number of applicants who desired to be transferred to this school from other high schools.

The accommodations asked for by the School Committee, and not as yet provided by the Schoolhouse Commission, all relate to secondary education. The Commission, finding that the funds at their command were insufficient to accomplish all that was required, wisely decided to make provision first for the younger pupils; consequently, only the primary and grammar school needs have been met in different sections of the city.

In order to complete the high school items and to provide each year permanent new school buildings as required, the Schoolhouse Commission has asked the Legislature to authorize certain further loans within the debt limit. Sites for the Normal School, the model school to serve as a training school for the Normal, and the Girls' Latin School have been procured; and the land for the enlargement of the Mechanic Arts High School has been purchased. The plans for the addition to the Mechanic Arts High School have already been completed, and the plans for the other school buildings are well under way.

The number of pupils in the day schools on October 1, 1904, was 91,437; they were accommodated as follows:

In regular school-rooms	83,139
In portable buildings	4,608
In premises owned by the city, but not especially intended for school purposes	1,947
In hired rooms	1,743

At the same time last year the number of pupils accommodated in hired rooms was 3,679. This number has been reduced more than one-half by the opening of new schools, and it would have been still further reduced had not the rebuilding of the Tuckerman Primary School necessitated the temporary retention of the rented quarters in South Boston.

The hired school accommodations which were vacated during the year 1904-1905 are as follows:

APPOINTMENT OF TEACHERS.

The appointment of teachers is a duty of first importance. Too much care cannot be given to the consideration of the fitness of individuals for given positions, for the qualifications of the teachers determine the character of the schools. In filling vacancies in particular schools the efficiency of the teaching force and the relative number of experienced teachers employed have been considered. The extent to which young teachers can be put into the general service without injury to the system is a question which has long been in dispute and which still remains undecided. It is just and fitting that the teaching force should be recruited largely from the young women reared and educated in the city; but the policy of restricting appointments to residents of the city has never prevailed, and if it were adopted it would prove unwise and disastrous. Due recognition has been given to the graduates of the Normal School, but positions too difficult to be filled successfully by young teachers have been given to older teachers whose training and experience have been secured in other places. The number of Normal graduates appointed from September 1, 1904, to March 1, 1905, was 83. The number of positions in kindergartens, primary, and grammar schools, to which Normal graduates were eligible, but to which they were not appointed, was 23. The number of positions filled in high and other schools, to which Normal graduates were not eligible for appointments, was 26. The total number of appointments was 132.

Since it is necessary each year to take into the service a large number of teachers of limited experience it is important that the supervisors and masters should spare no effort to aid these teachers to win success. The best school is usually the one in which the largest measure of kindly interest in young teachers is manifested. It is not to be expected that the faculty of discerning the merit of young teachers and judging of their probable success will be possessed by all alike; nor that all will be equally successful in developing the latent power which will lead to success in their profession; but it is reasonable to assume that when the burden is found to be too heavy for the beginner, considerable encouragement and support will be given. This assistance should come not only from the masters and supervisors, but from the experienced teachers as well. Not unfrequently conditions require the appointment of teachers of proved ability whose training and experience have been gained in other cities and towns. The judicious introduction of such teachers is of such unquestionable benefit to the school system that every school should receive a reasonable number of such appointments.

CLASSIFIED LISTS.

The appointments of Normal graduates have been made from classified lists, determined (1) by the record in the Normal School, (2) by the Board of Supervisors. The first list contains the names of the class of 1904, the second the names of all other Normal graduates who have not been appointed to permanent positions. In the first list the order was determined by the marks given in the Normal School. The graduates were then divided into three groups, called A, B, and C. Those standing highest were placed in the A group, those next highest in the B group, and the others in the C group, each group containing approximately one-third of the whole. Each of these groups was subdivided into smaller groups in which the relative standing of the graduates was too close to make distinctions profitable or desirable.

In making the second list the Board of Supervisors took into account the scholarship of each candidate as shown by her position in her class when she was graduated; but much greater weight was given to her record as a teacher, as shown by her services in temporary and substitute positions, as special assistant, and in the evening schools. All those who had shown superior ability were placed in the A group; those whose work was markedly inferior were placed in the C group, and the others were marked B.

This method of rating was regarded by the masters as an improvement upon the numerical order in which the candidates had formerly stood, as it afforded them greater latitude in the choice of their assistants. It was received also with special favor by the graduates of the school, whose feelings were no longer injured by a distinction in marks where it was acknowledged that discrimination was difficult, if not impossible. Moreover, the method of rating was in accord with the code established by the Board of Supervisors, which has been used for many years in rating the standing of pupils in the schools and the examinations of candidates for certificates of qualification to teach. The letters A, B, and C signify, respectively, excellent, good, and passable.

The first of these lists, that of the graduates of the year 1904, contained 124 names, of which 44 were in group A; of these, 20 have been appointed on probation.

The second of these lists, that of the graduates from the Normal School in classes prior to that of the year 1904, contained 158 names, of which 28 were in group A, 55 in group B, 53 in group C, and 22 were those of graduates who could not be classified because of incomplete records; of these, 63 have been appointed on probation from groups A and B.

SPECIAL ASSISTANTS AND PERMANENT SUBSTITUTES.

During the part of the school year which has already elapsed, 158 special assistants have been appointed. The regulations provide that whenever the number of pupils registered upon the list of a teacher of any grade exceeds fifty-six, a special assistant may be appointed to work with her. This rule has been in force three years, and the number of special assistants has increased each year. This plan has found such favor with the principals of the districts and with the graduates of the Normal School that it threatens to eliminate the corps of permanent substitutes. Very few Normal graduates can be induced to serve as permanent substitutes when a special assistant's place can be had, because the service of a special assistant is easier, and as a rule more continuous and consequently more remunerative, although the pay of the permanent substitute per day of actual service in substituting is a third more than that of the special assistant. Then, there are restrictions in regard to the employment of permanent substitutes that render these positions less desirable and less congenial than those of special assistants.

This plan of providing special assistants affords a great amount of help to the schools in the instruction of overcrowded classes, and such help has been much needed in many sections of the city. It also widens the opportunities of a large number of Normal graduates to obtain experience in the school-room. The young teacher may begin her calling under favorable conditions, and continue long enough to test fairly her ability as a teacher; and the principals and supervisors have the opportunity to observe her at work, and form an estimate of her promise and worth.

As the demand for permanent substitutes by the masters was so slight, and as so few Normal graduates were willing to accept the positions, none have been appointed this year. Notwithstanding this fact, I am not disposed to recommend that the provision for permanent substitutes be removed from the regulations. Another year may witness a different experience, as it is my purpose to give special attention to the corps of permanent substitutes with a view to making the work more systematic and attractive. I believe it can be made a valuable adjunct of the school system. In view of the admission of men to the Normal School and the large number of college graduates in attendance there, it may perhaps be found desirable to extend the permanent substitute plan to the High Schools. By so doing, a way would be opened for Normal graduates, after they are duly certificated, to obtain valuable experience in teaching high school subjects.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL.

An unprecedented increase in the number of admissions to the Normal School occurred in September. A much larger number of High School graduates was admitted than in former years, and the number from other sources has been largely augmented by the admission of men.

To satisfy the demand for an opportunity to obtain the training and practice in teaching required to enter the service of the city, the doors of the Normal School have finally been opened to young men graduates of colleges. The question of admitting men to the Normal School has been agitated for a considerable length of time. In 1903 the Corporation Counsel submitted an opinion that such action would be illegal. The School Board accordingly applied to the Legislature for authority to permit men to attend this school. This authority was given to the School Committee in April, 1904 (chapter 212 of the Acts of 1904). Soon after, an order was passed by the Board to admit men graduates of colleges beginning with the next school year.

There is no good reason why men are not as well entitled to pedagogical instruction as women to prepare for teaching in the city schools. But the practice has been for the Normal School to prepare teachers only for the kindergarten, and for assistants' positions in the primary and the lower grades of the grammar schools. Its graduates have been employed only as assistants in these schools, and it is not desirable to employ men permanently in these positions. Nor is it best to make the conditions for admission to the teaching service the same for men as for women. The salaries paid men are so much higher than those paid women that the city should require not only the scholarship and pedagogical training which it demands of women, but also considerable experience in teaching and administration. For the position of sub-master in the grammar schools, such experience is indispensable.

To prepare college graduates to teach in high schools a reconstruction of the Normal School course of study must be made. Pedagogical work adapted to furnish appropriate training for such teaching must be undertaken, and practice under skilful supervision be provided. The work in the high schools is largely departmental. College graduates intending to prepare for such work need to review only the special studies of the department in which they propose to teach; but this review should be thorough, both as to subject matter and methods of teaching.

To the college graduates who complete the Normal School course, certificates will probably be granted which will entitle them to teach as assistants in the grammar schools and in the evening schools. After they have demonstrated their capacity, both by their work in the service and by a suitable examination by the Board of Supervisors, their certificates should be extended to cover higher positions. The departmental plan which prevails under the elective system requires teachers to devote themselves mainly to single subjects. Consequently, the examination for certificates of qualification to teach in high schools demands a high degree of attainment in special subjects, and successful experience for not less than three years. If this standard is to be maintained, college graduates cannot be allowed to teach in high schools immediately after graduating from the Normal School. Men just out of college, untrained and inexperienced in teaching, are capable of doing much harm when put in charge of classes in high schools made up of boys and girls who have just come from the skilful and experienced teachers of the upper grades of the grammar schools.

An important addition to the work of the Normal School has been made by the introduction of instruction in manual training. The course should be further extended so as to provide adequate and systematic training for teaching all of the branches included in the course of study for the primary and grammar grades. Such extension would be in accord with the original plan. When manual training, domestic science, etc., were first introduced into the elementary schools, special teachers were needed because the regular teachers had not been able to acquire the necessary technical knowledge of the new subjects. It was expected that these subjects would soon be taught by the grade teachers, but this expectation has not thus far been realized; nor has there been until the present year any systematic effort in this direction. When the graduates of the Normal School are competent to teach these special subjects the need will no longer exist for the appointment of special teachers for the elementary schools. Whenever special teachers are appointed they should be competent to teach the regular teachers, and be required to devote their energies to that work and not to teaching the pupils.

The housing and equipment of this school have never been adequate for the important work of training the pupil teachers of the city. In this respect, the school has always been at a disadvantage when compared with the State Normal schools; but it is now assured that new and ample accommodations will be speedily provided, as all difficulties that have stood in the way of the erection of a new building have been removed.

NORMAL SCHOOL ADMISSION EXAMINATIONS.

During the year the plan of examination for admission to the Boston Normal School has been materially changed. The new plan is designed to correct certain evils which have arisen under the plan which has prevailed for some years past. By the old plan the candidate was examined in eight subjects. There was a strong temptation to elect as many as possible of these subjects during the last year in the high school. One serious result was the overloading of pupils to such an extent as to materially interfere with sound scholarship and in many cases to cause failure to graduate. A superficial process of preparation for examination in seven or eight subjects was substituted for serious and intensive work covering a more limited field. Thus the last year in school, which should be the best, became for many the least profitable. A second result was that subjects which naturally should be pursued at or near the beginning of the high school course were deferred until the end. For example, algebra, which has its greatest educational value in the first year, was transferred to the fourth year so that the pupil might have it fresh in mind. Even though elementary algebra was studied in the first year, it was elected again in the fourth year, and, though called in some cases advanced algebra or Mathematics III., it was in fact for those preparing for the Normal School but a review of elementary work. Similarly, pupils taking advanced chemistry in the fourth year gave one hour or more per week to reviewing certain portions of elementary chemistry which they thought would be needed for the examination, thus reducing the amount of time given to advanced work and weakening rather than strengthening their whole knowledge of chemistry.

In order to correct these evils, the new plan provides that the subjects required for admission to the Normal School be divided into two groups. In one of these, called the certificate group, are placed those subjects which will be completed by the end of the third year. The candidate for admission to the Normal School will be excused from examination in each of these subjects for which she presents a certificate showing that the subject has been completed with high standing in the high school. The second group, called the examination group, contains those subjects which the pupil will naturally be studying during the fourth year, and in which an examination can be taken without incurring the disadvantages enumerated above as arising from the old plan. In order that no injustice may be done to those who have been preparing for examination under the old plan, examinations under both plans will be offered this year.

The groups of subjects, with the amount of work covered, indicated by the number of points set opposite each subject, are as follows:

GROUP I. — CERTIFICATE SUBJECTS.

1.	History (Ancient, Mediæval, or English)	. 3 points.
2.	Algebra	4 “
3.	Geometry	4 “
4.	Drawing	3 “
5.	Biology	3 “
6.	Physics	4 “
7.	One foreign language (Latin, French, or German),	8 “

GROUP II. — EXAMINATION SUBJECTS.

8.	English (Composition and Literature) . . .	15 points.
9.	United States History	3 “
10.	Music	3 “
11.	Chemistry	4 “
12.	Foreign Language (Latin, French, or German),	6 “

Candidates, who are not graduates of a Boston High School, to be eligible to an examination for admission to the Normal School, must have completed a four years' course of study equivalent to that pursued in the Boston High Schools, and have obtained a diploma. Certificates, presented by these candidates, showing that the subjects in Group I. have been completed with high standing in the high schools which they have attended, may in the discretion of the Board of Supervisors be accepted in place of examinations in the subjects of that group.

THE HIGH SCHOOLS.

Boston was the first city to make the high school a part of its public school system, and for many years the Public Latin School, the English High School, and the Girls' High School were acknowledged to be the leading institutions of their class in the country. The impulse which emanated from these institutions, reinforced by the rapid growth of public sentiment in favor of higher education, has extended its influence until high school training is now freely offered in every large community in the Northern States. The liberal expenditures which have been made for buildings, equipment, and teaching force, have placed the suburban high schools of Boston on an equal footing with the central schools, and a large opportunity for special training has been offered in the Mechanic Arts High School. Nevertheless, the growth of the city, and the ever increasing interest in high school education, have made it impossible to keep pace with the demands. The growth of the high schools is shown by the following table:

In the fall of 1901 the South Boston High School was established. At the same time new and spacious buildings were opened for the Dorchester High School, the East Boston High School, and the West Roxbury High School. The opening of these buildings will account in a measure for the increase in the number of high school pupils, as they in some degree met the demand for accommodation. The increase in high school attendance for the year 1904-05 over that for the year 1903-04 was 495; this does not appear to be due to exceptional causes. This increase, however, has been equivalent to the housing of what would have been considered a few years ago a high school of considerable size.

The net increase in the Mechanic Arts High School would have been greater by at least 100 if all who desired admission thereto could have been received. Many of these pupils who were refused admission are included in the numbers given in the table, but many who were refused admission to the Mechanic Arts High School did not enter other high schools. The number of boys that can be admitted to this school is strictly limited, for obviously every boy must have a working place. When every working place (bench, anvil, or lathe) is used every hour of the day, the largest number of pupils that can be placed in the first-year class is 288; in the second year class, 216. The number of applicants for admission to the first-year class was so large that it was absolutely necessary to place on the waiting list all of the boys who had been promoted from the public grammar schools on probation.

In view of the facts presented, the entire high school problem should be carefully considered, and the policy of the city concerning the erection and size of high school buildings definitely determined. The congestion in the Dorchester and Roxbury High schools makes the question one of immediate and vital importance to those localities. But the decision should not be influenced by the necessities of a particular time or individual case; it should be reached only after due consideration of all its factors, and in the light of the broadest and best experience.

Economical considerations have led many cities to gather into one high school a much larger number of pupils than can be accommodated in any high school in Boston. A building designed to accommodate 1,000 pupils can be erected at a considerably less cost per pupil than one planned for only 500. The cost of laboratories and other expensive special equipment will not be much greater in one case than in the other. The limit of economical expansion is not reached until the number of pupils becomes large enough to require the constant use of the entire plant. A very large school, if properly organized, can be so administered that most of the advantages of the small school will be secured. In a large school, however, the principal becomes merely an executive officer; the work of its teachers must be placed upon a departmental basis with adequate supervision, and some of the fine spirit of the best small schools is necessarily lost. In a small high school the personal influence of the principal can be brought to bear directly upon most of the pupils, and his scholarship and skill as an instructor become an inspiration and example for all the subordinate teachers. Thus the sympathetic and hearty co-operation of teachers and pupils can be easily secured and the most desirable school spirit and unity be more easily maintained.

ELECTIVE STUDIES.

The elective course of study has now been in operation in the high schools for four years. This period is not long enough to serve as a satisfactory test of the system, but it is sufficient to indicate its tendencies and reveal some of its advantages and defects. The probability of reaping all the benefits which are expected from it will be increased if the fundamental objections to it are kept constantly in mind. The free election of studies by high school pupils makes them the arbiters of their intellectual training and of their educational career at an age when their intelligence is narrow and insufficient, when their judgment is untrained and inconstant, when their likings and tastes vary with the day, when their motives are likely to be determined by trivial and secondary considerations, and when the real value of studies can at best be but faintly apprehended. This freedom invites the pupil to ignore the results of experience and the well established laws of the human mind. Fortunately, however, the elective system has been so administered in our high schools as to avoid most of its dangers and preserve most of its benefits.

The practice of the different schools has varied considerably, but the best results have been secured where the choice has been restricted to tolerably well defined courses, and the election of particular studies has been permitted only when fully justified by individual needs.

The limitations of the daily programs, the demands of the colleges, normal schools, and other higher institutions, and the wise counsel of head-masters and teachers have combined to cause most pupils to pursue comparatively systematic and well chosen courses of study. The standard of scholarship has been raised, and the schools have not suffered greatly from the incongruities, disorders, and derangements which might be expected to prevail as a result of this attempt to meet the real or fancied needs of every individual.

High commendation is due to the earnest and judicious efforts of head-masters and teachers to encourage a wise choice of studies and prevent disastrous mistakes. The schedules of studies selected by first-year pupils require special attention, and it is not improbable that experience will show the need of restrictions in the first year of the course, whatever may be the freedom allowed in later years. If the dangerous tendencies of the elective system are not overlooked, and the large liberty of the present course of study is wisely used, there will be no reason to regret the removal of the restraints of definite prescriptions. The choice of studies should never be determined by caprice. Individual needs should be respected, but no pupil should be permitted to deprive himself of the intellectual advantages which result from prolonged and systematic efforts.

DIPLOMAS.

When the suburban districts were annexed to Boston in the early seventies, the School Committee, to save the expense of maintaining small classes of fourth-year pupils in each of several high schools, decided to combine in the central high schools all of the fourth-year pupils, and to give diplomas in the suburban high schools at the end of three years.

This plan ceased to be practicable long ago, and provision has been made in all of the high schools for a fourth-year diploma. Certificates of proficiency are given to pupils who have satisfactorily completed a part of the authorized course of study.

Boston is the only large city in the country that now gives a high school diploma at the end of a three years' course of study. Throughout the country the high school diploma is understood to represent a four years' course; therefore, the diplomas given in Boston high schools at the end of the third year establish a lower standard and give to both parents and pupils a false impression concerning a high school course.

The public does not discriminate between the first and second diplomas, consequently those who complete the full course fail to receive the recognition to which they are justly entitled. There is now no good reason why the standard of the high school diplomas of Boston should not be as high as that in the other large cities in the country. It is desirable that the granting of a diploma at the end of the third year should be discontinued.

ATHLETICS.

Athletic activities modelled after those of the colleges have become factors of such magnitude in most of the high schools as to interfere seriously with the regular work. This athletic spirit does not serve to encourage large numbers to engage in healthful exercise, but concentrates attention upon small groups of pupils who have special aptitude for certain games, and exalts their achievements so as to give them entirely false notions of their importance. The athletes are apt to be indifferent students, and the influence which they exert among their schoolmates on account of their athletic superiority is vastly out of proportion to their real merit.

The athletic spirit deserves encouragement, and should be made to play an important part in the education of youth. The objectionable features in its development in the high schools have been mainly due to the lack of suitable playgrounds and proper direction by the school authorities. The interest which the head-masters and teachers of the Boston high schools have recently manifested in athletics has done much to improve the situation. The appointment of special assistants to the director of physical training and the approval by the high school committee of the rules formulated by the head-masters for the government of athletic sports were important steps in the right direction. These rules undertake to safeguard the purity of the sports, prevent improper and unsportsmanlike conduct, and discourage neglect of legitimate school work. The duties of the special directors of athletic sports should be carefully defined, and their relations to the schools to which they are assigned accurately determined.

Further legislation is desirable to give the School Committee adequate authority to control athletic sports. A bill to that effect has been introduced in the Legislature, and the weight of public opinion appears to be in its favor. The head-masters can regulate the use of school premises for all the purposes of athletic organizations, but their authority over the boys on fields not controlled by the School Committee is not adequately sanctioned by law. They are, however, supported by the parents, and except in rare instances by the boys themselves, who realize that their sports are cleaner and more satisfactory when reasonably regulated, and that those teachers who voluntarily devote a large amount of time to the interests of the boys' sports are friends and helpers. But it is important that the authority of the School Committee should be extended by legislative enactment to cover all forms of athletic activities in connection with the schools.

Suitable enclosed playgrounds for the use of the high schools are greatly needed, but it is not to be expected that they will be supplied at public expense. It is not easy to suggest a way in which large wealth can be more worthily used for the public than by providing such athletic fields. No better gifts to the city could be made by wealthy, public-spirited citizens. The example of the donor of Soldiers' Field to Harvard University deserves imitation.

HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS' CERTIFICATES.

The plan of examinations for high school certificates has been greatly changed during the year for the purpose of adapting it more nearly to the present needs of the schools. When college graduation was not a requirement for the obtaining of a high school certificate it was necessary for the examination to test the general scholarship of the candidate. Now the possession of a diploma from a college or university approved by the Board of Supervisors may be accepted as evidence of academic training covering a considerable field. It has been possible, therefore, to materially decrease the scope of the elementary examination, but because not every college graduate has the breadth of culture prevailing among the high school teachers the elementary examination is still maintained. In its present form it is designed to show that the candidate has that use of English and that knowledge of literature, history, principles of education and language which are necessary in order to maintain himself with the pupils and teachers of our secondary schools.

During the last few years it has been shown that the departmental method of organization meets the needs of the modern high school better than the method of general teaching formerly in vogue. The general teacher knowing a little of several subjects has been gradually displaced by the teacher who devotes his entire time to a single branch. It is, therefore, necessary to test each candidate thoroughly with reference to the special subjects which he is to teach. For this purpose the advanced examinations have been very much strengthened, and by a system of grouping have been so arranged that the candidate for a high school certificate must show, in addition to knowledge of methods of teaching, extensive preparation in some one field, together with its related subjects.

In the better high schools surrounding Boston the departmental plan prevails, and teachers for the most part devote themselves to a single subject. After ten years of successful service a special teacher of French or English in these schools found great difficulty in passing the Boston examinations because of the necessity of taking algebra, physics, botany or other subjects which he had not studied since his college days. The abler teachers could not give the time necessary to review these subjects and would not take the examinations.

On the other hand, in the small high schools the teacher must of necessity teach several subjects. It has happened, therefore, that by far the larger number of candidates for high school certificates have come from the smaller high schools. The new plan provides a system which will much better test the fitness of candidates for the work which they will be required to do in the Boston high schools.

HIGH SCHOOL PRIVILEGES.

The splendid opportunities offered in the high schools cannot be brought to the attention of the people too frequently. Public opinion is likely to be unduly influenced by critics who magnify slight defects, real or fancied, in the public school system, and overlook its abounding merits. The high schools are the schools in which a vast number of young people are to receive their highest training for the work of life. In point of definiteness of aim, insistence upon high ideals, inspiration to noble endeavor, and skilful and stimulating instruction, the high schools do not suffer in comparison with the colleges. They should be improved as rapidly as possible, and their courses enriched and increased in length, so that they will furnish satisfactory education for all who cannot enjoy a college course. High school courses should be arranged and executed solely in the interest of the great mass of high school pupils, and preparation for college should become a very subordinate function.

The trend of educational policy in all large cities is toward a clearer recognition of vocational ends, and a better adaptation of instruction to actual community needs. The arguments by which the traditional high school courses of study were justified no longer command respect. It is freely admitted that mental power may be rapidly developed by activities which give pupils knowledge and skill of immediate service in the vocation which they will follow. The organization of the Mechanic Arts High School was an important step in the direction of adapting education to practical ends. This school does not teach trades, nor does it train engineers; but it does furnish an admirable foundation for an engineering career, and teaches the elementary principles and processes of many mechanical pursuits, so that the training which it gives becomes for many boys a stepping stone to profitable employment. Its rapid growth, its marked popularity, and the genuine success of its graduates give conclusive evidence that it has met a real need of the community.

The proposed commercial high school, if properly organized, will be another important movement in the same general direction. The mental activity of the age is centered in commercial pursuits, and the need of systematic training to meet the demands of business is too obvious to require argument. The danger most to be feared is that too narrow a view of the character and functions of such a school may prevail. It should be organized upon broad lines and be adapted to develop the keen intelligence which is essential to success in the higher realms of commercial activity. It should not concern itself mainly with the mere machinery and technicalities of business; but its curriculum should embrace mathematics, science, history and language, and its distinguishing characteristic should be to teach all subjects with a view to their practical applications. Pending its organization the existing commercial courses in the high schools should be improved as much as possible. The schools do not determine the tendencies of the age, but they should be quick to note these tendencies and adapt their work to the needs of the people.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.

Three new school districts, viz., the Blackinton in East Boston, the Jefferson in Jamaica Plain, and the Washington in the West End, were organized in September, and in January the Oliver Hazard Perry School in South Boston was opened. These schools, together with the others that are now in process of erection, will meet the present needs of the city. The fact must not be overlooked, however, that these needs are constantly increasing at a rapid rate.

The schools of the West End were all more or less disturbed by the changes resulting from the opening of the Washington School — the largest grammar school building in the city. The greatest relief was afforded to the Wells District, but it was not sufficient to make the grammar school hall available for the purposes for which it was intended.

The hall in this school is still used for class-rooms, and is likely from present indications to be so occupied for the coming year. There is no opportunity for the assembling of the whole school, and the loss is deeply felt. In some other districts a similar condition has prevailed, but the new buildings to be ready for occupancy in the fall will furnish relief.

There is no feature in modern school construction that is more indispensable than the hall in which the whole school can be assembled. It is a necessary and valuable adjunct in school administration. The frequent meetings of all the classes and all the teachers beget a love for a school as a whole on the part of both pupils and teachers, besides fostering a spirit of discipline and harmony, to the end that the best moral influences prevail. It has been noted, however, that the spacious halls in some school buildings are little used. Instead of being regarded as indispensable institutions for frequent, if not daily, use, they are looked upon merely as desirable conveniences for occasional resort. This is true of far too many schools.

The average work of the Boston elementary schools will not suffer in comparison with that of any other large city. Better work may here and there be found in favored communities, but Boston still leads in the general excellence of its elementary schools. This high standard is due in no small degree to the large amount of authority vested in the grammar masters, and the large liberty given them to accomplish results by methods which appeal to them most strongly and appear best adapted to the local conditions of their districts. But this large liberty is not without its disadvantages. Nominally there is one system. Nevertheless, in schools standing side by side there are wide differences in the interpretation of the course of study and in the emphasis placed upon particular lines of work.

Consistent and effective administration requires that these differences shall be removed, so far as that can be done without harmful interference with the individuality of the schools. It is unnecessary to discuss defects in detail, for desirable changes can most readily be secured without public notice by the quiet methods of efficient supervision. There are, however, a few points to which I desire to draw special attention.

Whatever the original reasons may have been for establishing separate primary and grammar schools for boys and girls, those reasons no longer exist. All primary and grammar school buildings should be readjusted so as to accommodate both boys and girls, and the pupils regrouped in mixed schools. Some districts would lend themselves to this redistribution more readily than others, but there are no serious difficulties to be met except the public sentiment which exists in some districts on account of differences in the attractiveness, or in the reputation of particular schools. Wherever this sentiment is justified by facts, changes should speedily be made so that these differences will no longer exist.

The complaints most frequently made concerning the grammar and primary schools refer to the large number of subjects taught. The course of study has been extended from time to time to meet the requirements of the people, and the studies added to the curriculum have been those for which there has been the most insistent public demand; but the results show that it would have been better if there had been more resistance to some of these demands. It is desirable that the course of study and the interpretations put upon it should be carefully examined with a view to eliminating all factors which do not yield educational results to justify their cost in time and money. It is very important that such readjustments should be made that the length of time required by the average pupil to complete the elementary course will be reduced at least one year. This action would be in accord with a recent recommendation of the Board of Supervisors.

Again, too little account has been taken of the great differences in native ability, and too much insistence has been placed upon artificial standards of attainment as conditions for promotion. There should be a close relation between the onward movement of the course of study and the advancing age of average pupils. It is much better that dull pupils should be permitted to move on with relatively meager attainment than that they should be kept at work for a long time with classmates much younger than themselves. A minimum of attainment should be required of all pupils, while at the same time opportunity for much greater achievement should be furnished for brighter pupils.

The small amount of time allowed for study by the daily program is also one of the most serious defects of the grammar schools. In a report issued in 1900 the Board of Supervisors called attention to this matter as follows:

"It is most desirable that special study periods should be provided for in the daily programs. It is even more necessary that the pupils should be taught how to use them. Studying is an art to be learned like any other art, under instruction and by practice. Although there are general principles underlying all, there is a special study art for each subject. The art of studying geography differs from the art of studying arithmetic, and the art of studying spelling differs from both. There appears to be much misapprehension on this point on the part of teachers. Too many put all their energy into teaching the subjects, instead of teaching the pupils how to study the subjects."

There should be at least two study periods every day for all the pupils, and the study and recitation periods should not exceed forty minutes. In this respect some improvement has recently been made, but the conditions which still exist in most schools are by no means satisfactory. Attention is so generally directed to increasing the pupils' fund of information that the schools fail to exercise their most important function, which is the development of self-reliance and the power of independent effort.

THE NO-SCHOOL SIGNAL ON STORMY MORNINGS.

A fairly satisfactory solution of the question of causing a suspension of the session of the schools on stormy mornings appears to have been reached. This question has been under discussion for a long time. As far back as 1876 a regulation providing for no morning session in stormy weather was adopted, but it was repealed after a trial of one year. In 1886 and in 1888 the question was again raised, and in both years the Board decided that it was impracticable to attempt anything of the kind because of the lack of facilities for giving the signal. In 1889 the Committee on Rules and Regulations reported in favor of a proposition requesting the City Council to instruct the Fire Commissioners to supply additional fire alarm bells in that section of the city in which the bells had been discontinued. The Fire Commissioners, however, continued to extend the system of still alarms, rendering the giving of the signal more difficult. This subject was again under consideration by the School Board in 1894 and in 1897. In 1901 the School Board made the following addition to the Rules and Regulations: "The Superintendent may suspend the morning sessions of the public schools on account of stormy weather by causing the same signal that is now given for the omission of the afternoon sessions to be sounded at 7.45 o'clock A.M." This regulation was in force until September 22, 1903, when it was repealed. The main reason for this repeal was the difficulty of giving the signal, the number of open fire bells being not sufficiently large to give the necessary information to any considerable number of pupils. The School Board again took up this matter on November 8, 1904, when it was ordered: "That the Superintendent be requested to have a signal sounded at 7.45 A.M. for the two school years, 1904-05 and 1905-06, on stormy mornings when in his opinion the morning sessions should be omitted, so that data may be obtained for amending section 211, chapter XVI., of the Rules and Regulations, which provides for the omission of the afternoon sessions only, this order not to apply to the high schools." Acting under this order, I have entered into an arrangement with twenty-eight manufacturing establishments provided with whistles or bells, which will repeat the "no-session" signal when requested, and I have found that this arrangement has worked quite satisfactorily. On three days during the present school year this signal has been sounded, viz., on Wednesday, January 4, on Wednesday, January 25, and on Monday, February 6. On all of these days the weather was so stormy that it was necessary to suspend the afternoon as well as the morning session. On these days the attendance in the high schools, especially the mixed high schools, was so greatly reduced that the sessions were of comparatively little value. There appears to be no sufficient reason why the morning signal, if it is to be continued, should not be made to apply to the high schools.

KINDERGARTENS.

The total number of kindergartens in the city is 98, and the number of regularly employed teachers in them is 188. The average number of children belonging to these schools in January was 5,204. Since the kindergartens were adopted in 1888, the plan of organization has continued unchanged. The age at which children are admitted is from three and one-half years upwards, and the time for kindergarten instruction is practically limited to two years. Several phases of kindergarten education have been introduced into our system, but there are some that have never been attempted. One drawback to the kindergarten has been the lack of attention paid to the planning and equipment of the kindergarten rooms. In most of our schools two classes are conducted in one room, and each class is a source of disturbance to the other. The equipment also in many cases is inconsistent with kindergarten methods.

The kindergarten period of education is valuable on account of its socializing influence, and on account of its power to acquaint children with the objects and laws of the physical world. The Boston kindergartens are generally successful in accomplishing the first of these objects, but in regard to the second they appear to need further development. The traditional Froebel outfit is wholly inadequate. The kindergarten should be furnished with objects of interest to children, a much greater number of natural and familiar forms should be introduced into these schools, and every effort should be made to bring the child into intimate relations with the life which surrounds him.

During the year several meetings of the masters were devoted to a consideration of the relation of the kindergarten to other public school education. The esteem in which the kindergarten is held in Boston was made evident in these discussions. It clearly commands confidence in its essential features and meets an acknowledged public demand. There is, however, an important difference of opinion in regard to the number of sessions per day which each child should attend.

This question of sessions affects the visits of kindergarten teachers to the homes of the children, the meetings of these teachers conducted by the director, the comparative value of life in and out of the school-room, and it challenges the notion that kindergarten instruction should continue through two years of the child's life.

In order to obtain evidence upon which to base an opinion, it has been proposed to establish afternoon classes made up of children attending kindergartens in the morning. By placing one such class in the district of each supervisor opportunity would be given for studying the problem under varying local conditions.

If this experiment be undertaken, the supervisor in charge and the director, after consultation with the master, should recommend the kindergarten to be chosen for the afternoon session; the afternoon session should be held in the kindergarten room, and should continue an hour and a half each school day; the class should not consist of more than twenty-five pupils; the instruction should include reading, writing, and elementary number work.

After due consideration, I am of the opinion that it is desirable to make an experiment along the lines proposed. In all its stages public instruction should inform as well as train the child. It may be questioned whether the kindergarten tends to over-emphasize training and to unduly minimize formal knowledge. Do its two years of instruction yield adequate results measured in terms of exact information? These and other important questions connected with kindergarten instruction should receive from those dealing with the earliest stages of school life the most earnest study and attention.

MANUAL TRAINING.

The report of the Committee on Manual Training, issued in December, 1904, gives a full and detailed account of the work in this department. Manual training is now understood to be an important and well established factor in the curriculum. The most pressing needs at the present time are greater definiteness of aim, a more satisfactory distribution of pupils and apportionment of the time of teachers, and better correlation with other branches of study. The able analysis of existing conditions in sewing and cookery made for the Committee on Manual Training by the supervisor of those branches, Miss Ellor E. Carlisle, and embodied in substance in the report above mentioned, shows clearly the need of a more uniform and consistent method of distributing pupils and assigning teachers. An important step calculated to remove the most serious defects has been taken by vesting in the Board of Supervisors the assignments of teachers in these branches. The unfair method of paying sewing teachers on the basis of the uncertain units, called "divisions," is to be gradually abolished, and a satisfactory sliding scale adopted.

An important change in the curriculum of the high schools has been made during the past year by the addition of manual training to the list of elective subjects. The work has been begun in the Dorchester High School, the Brighton High School, and the East Boston High School, and it is expected that classes will be organized in all of the high schools next September. This new elective will not duplicate the work of the Mechanic Arts High School, but will furnish a limited amount of hand training to pupils who do not desire a more extended course. The exercises will probably be such as can be executed with hand tools only in various materials — wood, leather, sheet metal, etc. They should be closely related to the lessons in drawing, and adapted to develop the artistic sense rather than an appreciation of the applications of the mechanic arts. It is impracticable to formulate a course of study at the outset. The work must necessarily be experimental, and vary considerably in the different schools. Later, results can be systematized so that each school will profit by the experiences of all.

MECHANIC ARTS EVENING HIGH SCHOOL.

The opening in the evening of the Mechanic Arts High School proved an interesting and instructive experiment. The sessions were held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings of each week, from September 26, 1904, to March 10, 1905. Classes were organized in elementary mechanical drawing, advanced mechanical drawing, wood-working, wood-turning, pattern-making, forging, and machine shop practice. The instruction was given mainly by the regular day teachers, and the organization of the school proved satisfactory. There were, at first, many more applicants for admission than could be accommodated, but it soon became evident that a considerable number had applied under a misapprehension concerning the character and necessary limitations of the school.

Inferences drawn from the work of the first season are liable to be modified by subsequent experience, but it appears to be well established that the demand for systematic instruction on the part of young mechanics is not as urgent as it was supposed to be. Only a limited number of earnest and faithful men were so impressed with the value of the opportunities offered as to make the necessary sacrifices to secure the instruction and practice. The differences of native ability and acquired skill were so great that a large amount of individual instruction was absolutely essential; and this necessity for individual instruction, coupled with the fact that many could not attend regularly, made the average cost of instruction per pupil much higher than the corresponding cost in the day school.

The admirable spirit shown by the majority of students, and the high character of the work accomplished, indicate that the school can be made a valuable factor in the public school system. If funds were available to sustain adequately all of the forms of instruction which experience has shown to be valuable, no question could be raised concerning the desirability of continuing this school, but since it is evident that considerable economies must be effected or the regular work of the day schools must suffer, I recommend that the work of this school be suspended during the coming winter. The work should be resumed, however, as soon as the financial conditions will permit.

VACATION SCHOOLS.

The following statement gives the course of study and the statistics of the Vacation Schools for the season of 1904 :

COURSE OF STUDY.

1. School Studies :

Any of the elementary studies for which there may be a reasonable demand.

2. Manual Training :

Woodwork.

Ironwork.

Cardboard Construction.

Cooking.

Sewing.

Dressmaking.

3. Basketry :

Braiding, Weaving.

4. Drawing and Color Work.

5. Nature Study and Field Work :

Excursions in connection with Geography, History, and the chief industries of out-of-door life.

The first vacation school of which there is any record was established in this city in 1866. It was a private undertaking on the part of the First Church of Boston, in no way identified or connected with the public schools of the city. The first vacation school conducted as a part of a city school system was established in Newark, N. J., in 1883. During the past ten years vacation schools have received a great impetus and have been adopted as part of the public school systems in nearly all the large cities of the country. It was not, however, until after they were in successful operation in New York, Chicago, and many other places that they became a part of the school system here, where they speedily obtained unexampled prominence and popularity. Unquestionably they are a great public benefit and an immense boon especially to the poorer children in the crowded localities, for whom the education of the street is the only alternative to that which the vacation school offers.

The object of the vacation school is to keep children from the pernicious influence of the streets, gratify their desires for rational amusement, and stimulate an interest in helpful occupations.

The schoolyards are open for playgrounds and the schoolrooms for recreation, study, and instruction. The physical well being of the pupils is cared for by exercises which are wisely planned and carefully directed; the subjects taught are those most attractive and practical; and the teaching is adapted to arouse interest, appeal to the higher motives, and produce most desirable mental and moral results.

So widespread and general has the movement become throughout the country that even in the small towns school committees are aiming to give the children something to do during the vacation period for the exercise of their surplus vitality, which might be expended in wrong directions. The movement has extended to England through the report of the educational commission which recently visited this country, and the experiments that have been made in London have met with such success and favor that, according to the London Times, an urgent demand has recently been made upon the London County Council for the general establishment of such schools in the crowded and poorer sections of the city. These facts indicate the esteem in which this comparatively new feature of educational work is generally held.

It is my desire to emphasize the value of the special educational service which these schools perform. In this city they are firmly established in popular favor, and the good which they have already done, and the possibilities of the inestimable benefit which may be derived from them, entitle them to the most serious consideration and generous support. They should be placed upon as permanent a basis as the other schools of the city.

EDUCATIONAL CENTRES.

The number of teachers employed in the educational centres this year was 132; the number of pupils registered, 8,948; and the average number belonging, 6,437.

The educational centres were opened October 24, 1904, and continued until March 10, 1905. Of the five centres, one was located in each of the following districts: East Boston, North End, West End, Roxbury, and South Boston.

The educational centres had been in existence for the two preceding years, during which time perfect freedom had been given to each one to meet, in its own way, the needs of the community in which it was located. Instruction was furnished in almost every study and industrial pursuit for which a sufficient demand appeared. Clearly defined notions in regard to the field of instruction which the centres should cover were gained from this period of experimentation. Rules and regulations for their administration and a well considered schedule of the features to be introduced were adopted in October, 1904. To avoid a duplication of the studies offered in the evening schools this schedule was confined largely to industrial lines, such as instruction in domestic science and dressmaking, millinery, civil service, steam engineering, electricity, and mechanical drawing. Music and popular lectures and entertainments were given reasonable prominence.

The centres have become important social foci from which radiate cheerful influences to brighten the homes of many whose lives are devoted to daily toil. In their social aspect they present many interesting and valuable features. They encourage helpful association, enlarge acquaintance, and promote good-will among the people in the different neighborhoods in which they are located. The lectures attract large numbers of adults who appreciate the value of education, and gladly seek opportunities for culture and refinement.

The regular school work of many pupils has been greatly improved by the opportunities afforded in the centres for evening study periods with surroundings which naturally encourage studious effort. The boys' clubs gather from the street many who would not attend school, and engage them in useful activities which tend to cultivate manly thought and action.

The aims and methods of instruction in the centres differ fundamentally from those of the day schools, whose object is purely educational. There is the closest practicable connection between the instruction and the business and industries of actual life. The pupils are taught the rudiments of useful arts, and their time is employed in acquiring knowledge and skill likely to be of service in their daily occupations.

The centres supply needs not satisfied by the ordinary evening school. They furnish instruction to many who cannot be otherwise interested in school work. They increase the power of gaining a living, add wealth to the community, and enlarge the moral and intellectual resources of the people. Some advocates of the evening schools fear that the educational centres, with their varied programs, may attract many from substantial academic work. No rivalry should be permitted to exist between these two forms of educational effort. They should coöperate and be conjoined wherever practicable. The course of study in the evening schools should be extended so as to include the valuable features of the educational centres.

The establishment of educational centres, of vacation schools, and courses of free public lectures, all of which are now recognized to be within the functions of a metropolitan school department, has developed a grave financial problem. The annual increase in the amount allowed for the support of the schools has not been sufficient to provide for the normally increasing demands of the schools and for these additional activities which have now grown to such large proportions. A very serious financial question is thus presented of which the situation this year is fairly illustrative. Vacation schools will be possible this summer only by withdrawing funds from the evening school appropriation, and this will result in the curtailment of the evening school term. It must soon be determined from what source shall come the means of continuing these various meritorious works. It is evident that a more liberal allowance must be made to the School Department from the general tax levy, or that these new and highly valuable educational features must be very materially restricted, if not entirely abandoned.

SUPERVISION.

The emphasis placed upon efficient supervision by all who have had large experience with schools is in accord with the ever increasing specialization and employment of expert knowledge and skill in every department of industrial and professional life.

The school system of a great city is a complex and delicate mechanism likely to be seriously injured by any action not guided by competent and conscientious experts. The schools are the most important safeguards of society, and their greatest efficiency can be secured only by utilizing most completely all available professional skill and expert knowledge. With this thought constantly in mind, I have endeavored to assign the work of individual supervisors, and direct the work of the Board so as to secure the highest measure of professional efficiency. The supervisors have held conferences with the headmasters, and with various groups of principals and teachers, touching both the curriculum and important details of administration and instruction. Unity of purpose and harmony in administration have been promoted by these meetings, and a laudable spirit of coöperation has prevailed.

In the assignment of schools the aim has been to centralize as much as possible the work of local supervision. The grammar and primary schools of the city are divided into nine divisions of unequal size. Four of the divisions have nine school districts each, three have five each, one has six, and another four. To keep the divisions intact as far as possible all the schools of a division have been given to one supervisor, except in two sections of the city, where it was necessary in order to effect an equal distribution to apportion parts of divisions to different supervisors. The supervisors have established regular office hours at central schools in their districts, so that they may be readily consulted by teachers and masters. The existing divisions of the city should be discontinued and six divisions made with reference to a more economical plan of supervision. A supervisor should then be assigned to each division and made responsible for the work in all of its schools.

It has been my effort to relieve the supervisors of much time-consuming miscellaneous work which does not require their training and experience, and to concentrate their force upon the inspection of the schools. Inspection is the proper and legitimate function of the supervisor. He should make himself thoroughly familiar with the administration of each district, and inquire into the methods, characteristics, attainments, and efficiency of the teaching force.

The supervisor must understand fully the various sides of educational work. He must have proper standards in order to direct the work of others. His attitude towards all educational problems must be thoughtful and discriminating. It is his duty to set high ideals, to raise the standards of teaching, and to preserve, strengthen, and cultivate whatever is commendable.

By suggestion and advice, friendly criticism, encouragement, and support the supervisor's influence is exerted. The authority vested in the masters over the internal affairs of their schools makes their control and influence over methods of instruction and discipline more immediate and effective than can be exercised by any other school officer. They are accustomed to seek the advice and counsel of the supervisors and to act in accordance with their suggestions. Each recognizes and respects the responsibilities and functions of the other, and the heartiest coöperation exists.

CONCLUSION.

Large demands upon my time have been made by the miscellaneous duties of the office and by various meetings and conferences. Much time has also been devoted to personal interviews with candidates for positions as teachers and to the consideration of their qualifications. I have endeavored by as frequent visits as possible to become familiar with the condition of the schools. Many of them as yet I have found it impracticable to inspect, but in most of those that I have visited I have noted with pleasure a commendable professional spirit and a general excellence of work. Wherever conditions appeared to demand special attention I have made personally a thorough investigation.

By the rules of the School Committee, the Superintendent is specifically charged with the duty of enforcing all regulations of the public schools, and all orders of the School Committee concerning the supervision, instruction, and management of the schools. It has been my aim to construe the rules in a fair and liberal spirit, follow them consistently, and insist that the entire administration of the schools should be conducted in accordance with them. They conserve the experience of many years, and are a safe guide under all ordinary circumstances. They can be of little use, however, if they are lightly set aside and are not generally regarded as a standard to which all must conform. If experience shows that any regulation, when properly enforced, affects the schools unfavorably, or works injustice, or causes hardship to individuals, the fact will be speedily noted. The rules should then be changed by the competent authority.

A rule may properly be suspended when conditions are met which were not contemplated when the rule was made, but I have felt that such action should be taken with great caution, because frequent suspensions of rules tend to make legislation inconsistent and ineffective. In the few cases in which extraordinary conditions existed I have called attention to the facts so that appropriate action might be taken.

As the supervisors and principals have been chosen to assist in the administration of the educational interests of Boston on account of their demonstrated professional ability, I have constantly sought their advice and suggestions so that the entire system might be improved and strengthened by their experience and judgment. Genuine professional success is their highest ambition, and unselfish devotion to the schools characterizes their work. To their hearty coöperation is due whatever measure of success has attended my efforts to secure substantial educational progress.

To the members of the School Board I extend my sincere thanks for their encouragement and support.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE H. CONLEY,

Superintendent of Public Schools.
